Medical Transport Requires Datatrac® Expertise

As the technology leader for the expedited delivery industry, Datatrac Corporation works closely with carriers and shippers in a variety of industries to develop customized solutions. Now, Datatrac is bringing its operational expertise to the growing non-emergency medical transportation management (NEMT) market where specially equipped carriers provide patient transportation in non-emergency situations. When a major provider of NEMT services recently needed a complete logistics management system, they turned to Datatrac to adapt its technology and help them improve operational efficiency.

Built within the growing Datatrac Web™ solution, specialized NEMT components provide scheduling, dispatch, tracking and audit capabilities for service providers. At the same time, insurers and health care organizations have complete visibility into the transportation process to ensure that their patients are receiving the services they require. Utilizing real-time GPS positioning along with positive identification through bar code scanning and signature capture ensures the highest possible degree of accuracy, safety and efficiency when transporting patients.

Chris Bean, Datatrac VP of Sales commented, "Our modular approach to solutions helps us adapt to the business needs of a wide range of shippers and carriers. Expanding into the NEMT industry opens more revenue generation opportunities for carriers who have chosen to become part of the Datatrac Network." Comprised of hundreds of independent service providers across the US and Canada, the Datatrac Network offers shippers the ability to leverage a common technology platform for their last mile transportation needs. Through the Datatrac Shipper Services program, customized programs are designed to meet the needs of shippers in a variety of industries.
